Hacking Team Phone download Hacking Team Phone Hacking Team Phone Hacking Team is a company engaged in various cyber security and hacking services. The company specializes in building surveillance programs that allow them to covertly record phone calls and record video from computer users' cameras. One of the programs, known as Remote Control System was leaked by the hacker collective Anonymous on July 19, 2015. Hackers hacked Hacking Team's servers, which led to the leakage of highly classified info, including the software source code. The leaked data revealed that the company had sold SpyPhone, a product that allowed users to covertly record phone calls, and Remote Control System, a surveillance program that can detect if a potential target is a close associate, and if so, it's possible to track them through video recording. The leaked data also revealed that the company made use of a Silicon Valley-based company called Geofonics, a company that develops geofencing software used to identify potential targets. The leaked data also indicated that the company had sold SpyPhone to a country in the Middle East. The country has since been identified as Saudi Arabia. Once the Saudi Arabia government finished its testing, the program was taken a step further by the government and it was used to remotely identify potential targets in the country. The Hacking Team user manual and source code were also leaked. The source code is written in Python, a program that is e79caf774b
